“ARMED GROUPS” WORKSHOP

The Consortium for the Study of Intelligence, a project of the National Strategy Information Center (NSIC), has developed a syllabus, intended for defense and intelligence professionals, that examines the complex nature of armed groups, assessing the challenges they now pose to U.S. security and exploring approaches for meeting them. From Monday through Friday, 16–20 July 2007, the consortium will sponsor a workshop for twenty-five faculty members from military and intelligence schools. The workshop will be held at the Kent Manor Inn, near Annapolis on the Chesapeake Bay. The workshop will introduce the subject matter of the course and ways to teach it. The program, which combines presentations, discussions, and practical exercises, will be directed by Dr. Roy Godson, professor of government at Georgetown University and president of NSIC, and Dr. Richard Shultz, professor and director of international security studies at the Fletcher School of Tufts University and director of research at the Consortium for the Study of Intelligence. The workshop will be open to faculty members from U.S. defense and intelligence schools who teach in the areas of international relations, foreign policy, intelligence, and security studies and who are interested in learning how to teach a course (or part of one) on armed groups. To apply please e-mail the consortium at info@intelligenceconsortium.org, attaching a letter about your professional background and interests, a CV, and a request for an application. The consortium will cover the cost of accommodations (room and board) at Kent Manor Inn; participants will be responsible for their travel expenses. For information, e-mail rgodson@strategycenter.org.
